Our recent correspondence, from the United States has contained a description of American fee ing towards England which is may be useful. to consider with more than eastal attention, eapecially as the representation was made from an American point of view, and with a purpose of establishing its ressonable character, and at least, partial troth. The importance of the case, as thus opened for our contemplation, is certainly beyond question. We are assured that sentimenty | FFARE Unper Roomed Premises situated of "bitterness and irritation," towards us per- Wellington Street, next to the Premises of vade all classes of society in America, including Mesers, F. Nor does the feeling express merely such alienation or ill. blood as will occasionally disturb, the relations hetween the most right-mined States. It goes far beyond this. It is spoken of even by a grave and temperate organ of American opinion as familiarising the people with "the thought of war" with England, and we are also given to understand that the Government of Washington is subjected to a pressure from without in the same direction which if not predently resisted, would quickly precipitate a collision." All this points to something more than a more interruption of cordiality through janlousy or rivalry. Such a state of opiniun among a civilised, educated, and intelligent people is undoubtedly serious, and we turn with no elight interest to the allegations by which i is justified. It will be a sutlefaction to Englishmen to hear that no substantial grievance is founded on the conduct of England during the Civil Waz. When Americans are pressed upon this point they confess their inability to produce any ground of complaint. They make the acknow-ledgment rather grudgingly, but still they do make it. They are willing generally to admit that our promised neutrality was preserved to the end, and that no act of wilful commission or omission can be charged against the British Govergment. Their own experience has taught them how impossible it is for a Government to succeed always in controlling the adventures of private citizens, and they can hardly deny that we did our best. Their single grievance in this case is purely a sontimental one. They say that we gave them no sympathy; that our "educated classes" were all aganist them in the struggle and that the conduct and expressions of the aristocratio and wealthy classes of society were such as to produce the irritation now existing. We might any something upon these essertions, but it is unnecessary to do so, because it is presently acknow. ledged that in point of fact the feeling described dres not date from the war at all. It is of earlier growth and longer standing. It prevailed be ore the war began or was dreamt of, and the incidents of that memorable struggle did no more than intensify or quicken a disposition already ndterious. For the truth of the matter, therefore. we must go back a little further, and consult American history of twenty years since for the reasons which are now held to justily Americans in enterthining theiden of a bloody and calamitous war with the country from which they sprang. These reasons are frankly exposed to us. The Americans, we are told, are keenly and almost morbidly sensitive to the opinion of foreigners, and especially of Englishmen. They wince under criticism, and Road, and well suited for an Auctioneer's business. pine for sympathy and encouragement. They have had neither, but have, on the contrary, been incessantly subjected to ridioule and sercame. Tourists have crossed the Atlantic only to laugh at them, and have actually impeded by their scotfing the work of a rising nation. We Englishmen latve been the greatest sinners. We have held merican manners up to public derision, have passed without a word of praise the services renprovuksp a well-deserved animosity by our ungracious and inconsiderate conduct. There is the real indictment—the true account of our offending. Our conduct in the war was but of a piece with this previous behaviour. We were true to cur original root, and left and lef our original part, and left without any sympathy proximo. a people whom we had formerly treated without any respect. 100 , Old Copper Sheating FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

Tongage is very scarce more especially that of first class vessels of large carrying capacity. ips are now wanted for Boston, New York, China Howland's Island, Swansea est. There is not, we believe, any present requirement for Lumber vessels, to foreign ports as has been almost constantly the case for a year past. We note the following engagements as having transpired here during the fortnight. In our issue of the 17th July, we stated that the Derby had been taken up for Nanaimo at $5.50 per ton, to load quals for this port; a few days subsequently the A.M. Lawrence arrived from Vaiparaise, and as both ships belonged to George Howes & Co., they were successfull in exchanging off the Lawrence for the Derby by proposing to deduct 50c per ton frieght, and thus enabling them to secure a more desirable charter for the Derby. The Derby is now under charter to load Copper Ores for Swanzes, upon terms withhold. The Parsee has been chartered for Hongkong at $3 600. The ship Galaxes will probably proceed to Mazztlan for Dyo Woods, ect. thence to New York, on owner's account unless perchance a more desirable charter is offered soon. The Syren is under a bome charter for Baker's Island. The Euterpe has also a home charter to load Guano at the Chinches for Hamburg. The Midnight has cleared for Hougkong, and the George Peabody has sailed for Minila. The British bark Speriwell has also cleared for Hongcomprising a block of Buildings let on a long kong. The Brittania has a Guano charter. The British bark Constantia has been chartered for. Hongkong, reported at $5.500. The brig Belvidere for Shanghai, reported at $2,500. The brig Jeannie, for Shanghai, is said to get $6 per ton. The Kinglisher outward hound for New York, ran Consul's House measuring about 20 mow. A to ashore in the mud between M igs wharf and Black Point. She floated off at high ride but with aids Buildings on the Han-Yun side, comprising serious injury, and will proceed at once to Mare Island to discharge and repair before proceeding un The disengaged are as follows: Ships Nonparell, Charger, Cesarwich, and Ausel.
